Porecasting in golf is something like forecasting the weather. Sometimes you hit it right and sometimes you don't When you don't hit it right in your prognostications (a word which looks and sounds as formidable as a Sandwich bunker) you may, like the forecaster, be ready with a fitting excuse, such as that the golfer did not hit it right himself, the "It" referring to the ball. Fortunately for my reputation as a forecaster (yet to be stablished) I am not obliged to say who will win the British amateur championship; wherein I am more fortunate than the weather man, who must say what the weather is going to be and not merely what he thinks it will be.

Up to this year our golfers who have played abroad have been content to say that they hoped to make a decent showing, and their friends at home have followed their progress with no great expectancy of seeing them get far in the tournament. It has been a foregone conclusion that their race would soon be run.

There are several reasons for this. We have always been told and always have Francis Outmet are drawn in opposite have always been told and always have sections.

BATTING FORM TRUE TO TEAM POSITIONS

HEMPSTEAD PHILOSOPHER

Has Best Team, He Says, So Why Worry?-Chancemen Home This Week.

The position occupied by the leading clubs in the National League is consistent with the batting strength shown by those clubs, and batting is the most direct and influential factor in making runs. The I ttsburgs, Phillies and Brooklyns up to yesterday morning led the others with the bat, and that fact, no doubt, without trying to involve the situation with calibre of pitching encountered, on the subtle, explains more than anything else why they are where they are.

The hits per game made by the clubs up to Sunday were: Pittsburg, 9 1-9; Philadelphia, 10 1-7; Brooklyn, 9 1-7; New York, 8 1-6; Boston, 714; Cincinnati, 7 8-9; St. Louis, 7 1-10; Chicago, 5 6-10. ard against them is Tesreau. For that
